

Hancock County has a great balance of rural and suburban living: Small town life with everything that Indy has to offer less than 30 minutes away.
- Kristi Thompson

Hancock County offers a strong sense of community and a high quality of life.

Residents enjoy the fast growing arts community, coffee shops, fine restaurants, boutiques and galleries. Hancock County is rich with historical traditions and architecture, evidenced by its courthouse, antique shops and street festivals.

With a community that has become a destination, Hancock County captures the hearts of not only those who call it home, but those who come from outside its borders as well.

At Home in Hancock County

Hancock County home builders have helped grow the community into what it is today.

Many of the area's outstanding builders have achieved professional designations such as Certified Graduate Builder (CGB), Certified Graduate Remodeler (CGR), Certified Green Professional (CGP), and Certified Aging in Place Specialist (CAPS).

Offering a diverse range of housing options, Hancock County home builders can assist you in finding the right home to fit your lifestyle.

We both choose to live in Hancock County because we love being close to our family, friends, church and living in a country life style community.

-Warner & Linda Monroe

Founded in 1973, the Hancock County Builders Council provides its members with the education, training and business network to be the home building industry's top professionals.

Members of the Council are also members of the Builders Association of Greater Indianapolis.

Membership means these builders have agreed to adhere to the Quality Assurance Builder Standards as a requirement of membership.

Committed to raising the quality of life in Hancock County, the Council yearly donates thousands of dollars to local charitable causes as well as economic development efforts.
